VISNA Representative Report

2015 Membership Assembly

Renaissance Washington, DC Downtown Hotel

By: Alexandria Bradley, RN

Greetings to all. It was an extreme honor as the second alternate to be the representative for VISNA at the 2015 ANA Membership Assembly in Washington D.C. It was five days filled with an overwhelming amount of information that I can most certainly apply to my professional development as well as to the organization both VISNA and CBU.

The wealth of information received and knowledge shared with other nurses from across the continental US was breath taking. Amendments were made; laws were passed and so on. I was also instrumental in electing Ernest Grant as the first black male ANA president. He has a wealth of knowledge, experience, and is spoken highly of by other organizations across the US. This in and of itself is an important milestone and breakthrough for the nursing profession and ANA.

Today I want to share with you one of many important topics discussed that are of great concern. It is the involvement and participation of nurses in their professional organization. This applies to both the experienced and novice nurses. This is a pressing issue for nursing associations all over the globe. The vision is to engage members and develop leaders locally and in the digital age.

Membership engagement is the investment of time, money, attention, and participation by both members and the associations. The focus is to provide meaningful, mutually beneficial experiences and ongoing relationships that advocate the profession and the professional nurse. Membership engagement drives satisfaction, which is the driver of member retention and membership growth. Every interaction can raise association awareness and connection. To engage members we must be aggressive. How, when and where is the challenge. What else our leaders often ask. Well, let's try from the student level. An active student nursing association with a back bone of grassroots. Developing leaders at this level will prepare college graduates to take the lead once in the profession.

Well, what about the nurse? Nursing is not just at job its career. Do we really understand our purpose in this profession? Is it just to provide care, complete paper work and go home? What are the expectations of this career, and what are we bringing in and taking out? We can research innovative ways to engage our members, but what about the member, what are they seeking?

These are the challenges facing the profession of nursing. If this is not addressed the fate of the nursing profession is at stake. The age of the baby boomers is coming to an end. Nevertheless we must persevere and continue by doing whatever it takes to keep the professional organization active and productive. Let's try to change the face of the organization, let's try! It starts right here this very day, this very minute. It starts with me.

MEMBERSHIP ASSEMBLY HIGHLIGHTS

1. This ANA governance structure will remain until 2017 to allow more time to evaluate its effectiveness in receiving and responding to input from the constituent associations.
2. More services are available from ANA for the constituent associations to purchase at a reasonable cost.
3. Membership Recruitment strategies continues to be a priority in assisting the constituent associations, ie; retired nurses with inactive licenses are being considered for a special membership category.
4. Regretably, nurses in the USVI and Guam are still unable to access the professional insurance plans.

From the Desk of the Executive Director

VISNA has a paid membership of over 220 members yet only 15 of you to include the Board of Directors attended the recent biennial convention. Was there not enough advance information and Public Service Announcements? Was the venue not enhancing? Were the theme and speakers uninviting? With these questions and more the Board is seeking to understand the poor attendance. A survey to collect your answers will be circulated in the near future.

The professional practice of nursing has received the attention of the Institute of Medicine which is conducting a detailed analysis of its impact on patient care outcomes. In the territory this impact is already known and felt in the worsening RN nursing shortage. Individually no one will pay you much mind as you present your situations but collectively we will be heard, not only as a collective bargaining entity, but as a professional body.

Because of this limited involvement, elections had to be re-scheduled to take place by February 28, 2016. Please act on the Call for Nominations posted on the Home Page of this website. You are VISNA, not the Board of Directors. You also set the direction of the association.

Please continue to make the difference not only in your work environment but for YOUR association. Look for the survey!!!!!!
